

One system that runs the whole hospital — from the front desk to the national return.

Built for district hospitals, health centres and dispensaries. Every screen in this document is a photograph of the working system, not a mock-up.

Why this system

Most hospitals run on five books that do not speak to each other: the front desk, the laboratory, the pharmacy, the accounts, and the staff register. One patient is written down five times — and at month end nobody can say with certainty what was collected, what left the shelf, or who never came back.

Written once

A patient is registered once. Laboratory, pharmacy, wards and accounts all read the same file — no re-typing and no two spellings of one name.

Every shilling is traceable

A service raises a bill, a payment raises a receipt, and both post to the ledger. There is no second place where money can be taken.

A visible queue

Management can see, right now, how many are waiting, how long they have waited, and where the queue is stuck.

Returns without an all-nighter

HMIS returns and disease surveillance come out of the daily work, not from counting registers the night before the deadline.

Every action has a name

Who cancelled a bill, who gave a discount, who dispensed — the trail is written by the server itself and cannot be edited by a user.

Swahili and English

Navigation and instructions are in both. Each member of staff picks their own; clinical records stay in English, as the national forms are.

The system at a glance

Everything shown here lives on one hospital server. Staff reach it through a browser; phones and desktop clients use the same door.

Only one door is open to the outside. Every request passes through it, is checked, and is recorded — there is no side entrance to the record.

The daily dashboard

Every unit at a glance: who has been seen, who waits for a doctor, beds, tests, stock below reorder, and the day's money.

The patient journey, start to finish

Ten steps from the door to the closed record. Each shows what the member of staff does — and what the system refuses to let happen.

Reception: register, or find the returning patient

A new patient is registered on one form: name, sex, age, phone, region, next of kin, and insurance if they have it. The system issues the file number itself. A returning patient is found by name, phone or file number — never registered twice.

What is prevented: a national ID already on the register is refused, so one person cannot end up with two files.

Patient Number
Issued by the server on save, so two desks registering at once cannot be given the same one. It is shown here once the file exists.

Search first
A returning patient already has a file. Registering a second one splits their history in half.

The file fee and the consultation fee

The hospital sets its own fees in the price list. If it collects before the consultation, the patient pays at the desk and the receipt prints there. An insured patient is not asked for money — a claim is raised instead.

What these two fees are

They are the charges reception raises, automatically, in the same transaction that opens the attendance — so a registered patient always has a bill. Everything else a patient is charged for is raised by the department that does the work: the laboratory when a test is ordered, the pharmacy when medicine is handed over.

Opening a file

Not charged

Charged ONCE, the first time a person is registered.
A patient who comes back next month already has a file and is not charged again — not by a second visit, and not by two clerks registering them at two counters at once.

Price list code

REG

Which tariff carries this fee. Leave it empty if this hospital does not charge for it. Suggested: REG

Amount (cash patients)

Written to the price list. A scheme patient is charged that scheme's price for the same code — set those on the Service Tariffs screen.

Seeing a doctor

Not charged

Charged per attendance, and only when reception says the patient is seeing a doctor.
Somebody collecting a repeat prescription or coming for a dressing change is not charged this. The tick is on the reception screen, beside the patient.

Price list code

CONSULT

Which tariff carries this fee. Leave it empty if this hospital does not charge for it. Suggested: CONSULT

Written to the price list. A scheme patient is charged that scheme's price for the same code — set those on the Service Tariffs screen.

When the money is collected

Pay before being seen

On: a patient who owes anything is sent to the cashier first, and goes on to triage once the payment lands. Off: they go straight through and the bill is collected on the way out.

Patient flow settings

The queue: everybody knows their turn

The queue board shows the token and the service point. Nurses and clinicians see the same list: who is waiting, for how long, and at which stage.

Triage: the first measurements

The nurse records temperature, blood pressure, pulse, weight and oxygen. The observations stay on the file for good, and the clinician sees them before starting.

What is prevented: taking observations is not writing up a consultation. A triage nurse cannot write the clinical note, and a clinician needs no extra permission to take vitals.

The screenshot displays the 'Hospitali ya Wilaya' application interface. The left sidebar contains a navigation menu with items like 'Muhtasari', 'Mapokezi', 'Wagonjwa', 'Mahudhurio', 'Kliniki', and 'Afya ya Mama na Mt...'. The 'Kliniki' section is expanded, showing 'Uchambuzi wa Awali' as the selected option. The main content area is titled 'Triage' and includes a subtitle 'Observations, and the acuity that re-orders every queue in the building.' Below this, there are four summary cards: 'Waiting for triage' (0), 'In the building' (16), 'No acuity yet' (0), and 'Longest wait' (1h 42m). A large central area shows 'Nobody waiting for triage' with a heart icon. The top right of the interface has a search bar, a 'Mtandaoni' button, and a 'Refresh' button. The bottom left shows the user 'admin SYSTEM_ADMIN'.

Laboratory and imaging

The order reaches the bench with the name, the file number and the reason. The technologist enters results; anything outside the critical range goes on a list somebody has to look at and acknowledge.

Two pairs of eyes: whoever entered a result cannot be the one who releases it. The system refuses, even for somebody holding both permissions.

Admission: ward, bed and chart

The patient is given a real bed on a real ward. Nursing tasks and drug rounds are scheduled by the hour, and the bed charge reaches the bill every night without anybody having to remember.

The bill, the receipt and the claim

Every service given lands on one bill. The cashier takes the money — cash, mobile money or card — and the receipt prints. For an insured patient a claim is prepared for the scheme, with the covered percentage on it.

Closing the record, and the return

The attendance is closed with a diagnosis and an outcome. Records are coded, and the HMIS figures build themselves from the work that was done — not from counting registers at month end.

HMIS Returns

Counted from the records themselves, month by month, with what cannot be counted named.

Month

Indicators counted

21 from the operational tables

Cannot be counted

must be completed by hand

4 indicators cannot be filled in from this system

They are listed below with the reason, and left blank rather than returned as zero. A zero on a national return means "none happened" — sending that when the truth is "we do not collect this" misleads a district into planning around a service it thinks nobody uses.

Outpatient

Code	Indicator	September	Previous	Change
OPD-01	Total outpatient attendances	16	0	+16
OPD-09	Referrals out	6	0	+6
OPD-04	Malaria cases confirmed Diagnoses are coded free-text; there is no malaria test result linked to a diagnosis.			Not collected — leave blank

RCH

Code	Indicator	September	Previous	Change
RCH-01	Antenatal bookings	6	0	+6
RCH-02	Antenatal contacts attended	0	0	same
RCH-05	Pregnancies with three or more IPTp doses	0	0	same

HMIS returns

Department by department

Beyond the patient journey, the system holds every unit that keeps a hospital running. This is the summary; all 141 screens are in the appendix at the end.

Emergency and casualty

Arrivals are recorded even when nobody knows their name, sorted into five triage categories, and the board shows who must be seen now.

Procurement

Human resources and payroll

Employees, posts, attendance, leave, recruitment, training, personnel documents and payroll. A payroll run has three steps — build, compute, approve — and whoever builds it is not the one who signs it off.

Employees

Payroll

Support services

Blood bank, mortuary, ambulances, and assets and maintenance. Each is switched on only at a branch that has it.

Blood bank

Assets & maintenance

Money and accountability

The hard part of a hospital is not the treatment — it is making sure what was given was paid for, and what was paid reached the bank. This system holds every step on one path.

The controls that are built in

ACTION	WHO MAY	WHY
Discount a bill	Its own permission	A discount is a legitimate way for money to leave, and also an illegitimate one.
Void a bill	A different permission again	Whoever raised it should not be the one who erases it.
Reverse a payment	The strictest till permission	It is cash leaving the drawer after it arrived.
Edit a posted ledger entry	Nobody	A mistake is corrected by posting its mirror image, so both stay on the record.
Print a credit note	Only against a settled bill	A credit note against a live debt is a false document.
Pay a supplier	Only after order, delivery and invoice match	This is what stops a payment for goods that never came.

Journals & Ledger

Every posting, from every module. A posted entry is corrected by reversal, never by editing.

A big hospital and a small dispensary

The system is one. What differs is what is switched on at each branch. A dispensary with no theatre does not see a theatre menu at all — and cannot reach that screen by typing its address either.

Switching a module on or off is an administrator's job, not an engineer's. It is done on one screen, and the reason is recorded — so that anybody who asks "why is this menu missing?" gets an answer instead of a guess.

Modules and services — the branch What is switched off disappears from every menu at that branch, and the API switches switches refuses its requests.

Many branches, one system

A hospital with satellite sites runs them all on one system. Each branch sees its own records; head office sees them together. Somebody who works at one branch does not see another branch's money or patients.

Security, permissions and the audit trail

A patient record is a legal confidence. The system does not protect it by hiding buttons — the server itself refuses a request from somebody without the permission, even if they type the address directly.

A permission per action

More than 160 distinct permissions. A cashier sees money, not lab results; a nurse sees charts, not salaries.

A trail that cannot be edited

Every action is written by the server: who, when, what. No user has any way to write to that log, or to erase from it.

Two pairs of eyes

Lab results, payroll, expenses and reversals — each has one person to prepare and another to approve.

Staff accounts

There is no self-registration. An administrator opens the account, grants its roles, and can suspend it the day somebody leaves.

Users and roles

Audit log

When the network drops: the system does not lie about it. The screen says plainly that there is no connection and that what is typed will not be saved — rather than showing a "saved" tick for something that never reached the server.

National returns and insurance

HMIS figures build from attendances, diagnoses and services given. Notifiable conditions (IDSR) are recorded as they occur, with the immediate ones flagged for same-day notification.

Disease surveillance

Insurance claims

On the insurance side: schemes are registered with their coverage percentage, a claim is prepared from the real bill, and its stages are tracked until it is paid or rejected — with the reason.

Operational analytics Patient flow, revenue, and waiting times.

Phone and desktop

The system opens in a browser on any hospital computer — nothing to install on each machine. For anyone who wants a phone app or a desktop program (for receipt printers or barcode scanners, say), the whole API is documented: 553 endpoints, with a Postman collection and an OpenAPI file for developers.

On the ward

Vitals, charts and the queue from a tablet.

At the counter

A desktop client printing receipts straight to the printer.

For the patient

A patient portal: appointments, released results, bills and messages.

ⓘ What you can reach is set by your roles. If a screen is missing, ask an administrator to grant the permission rather than looking for another way in.

English Kiswahili

The sign-in screen The hospital's own name and logo, not the vendor's.

Getting started: what is needed

ITEM	DISPENSARY / HEALTH CENTRE	DISTRICT HOSPITAL
Server	One solid PC (8GB RAM) or a cloud server	A real server (16GB+), or cloud
Workstations	2 – 5	15 – 60
Network	A local network; the internet is not required for daily work	A solid LAN; internet for claims and returns
Power	A UPS on the server	UPS and a generator
Printers	One receipt printer	Receipts, invoices and labels
Training	2 days	5 – 10 days, by unit

How a deployment goes

1. Week 1 — Standing it up. Server, network, and the hospital's own profile: name, logo, branches, departments and the price list.
2. Week 2 — Users and permissions. Staff accounts, with roles that match the jobs people actually do.
3. Week 3 — Training by unit. Front desk and cashier first, then clinic, lab and pharmacy, and accounts last.
4. Week 4 — A staged start. Begin with reception and payments only for a few days, then add the other units until everything is inside.
5. Ongoing — Backups. A daily copy, and a restore drill once a month. A backup nobody has ever restored is not a backup.

What is not there yet

Said plainly, because finding out later costs far more than being told now.

- TRA electronic fiscal receipts (EFD). The system prints its own numbered receipts with a full trail, but it does not yet talk directly to an EFD device.
 - Sending SMS. The system composes and queues messages, but the hospital needs an SMS gateway account for anything to actually leave.
 - Full offline working. A workstation must be connected to the hospital server. If the link drops the system says so rather than quietly queueing clinical writes.
 - Direct laboratory analyser links. Results are typed by the technologist; machine interfacing is future work.

Common questions

Can we start with only a few units?

Yes, and it is the recommended way. Start with reception and payments; add laboratory, pharmacy and the wards in turn. What is switched off is not visible at all.

What happens to our old records?

The patient register can be imported (names, file numbers, phone, insurance). Full historical clinical notes usually are not migrated — a hospital starts fresh for patients as they come, and the old register stays as an archive.

Where does our data live?

On your hospital's own server, or on a cloud server you choose. Patient records do not leave it — unless you deliberately switch on the AI assistant against an outside provider, which stays off until you enable it and supply a key.

What if the power fails mid-work?

What was saved is saved. Because each action reaches the server as it happens, what is lost is the form in front of somebody — not a day's work. A UPS on the server is the single most important protection.

Can we see who did what?

Yes. Every action carries the name of whoever did it and the time. That log cannot be edited by any user, at any level.

Messages

Ask a colleague a question. Anything that belongs in a patient's file still goes in the file.

This is not the clinical record
A message is how two people agree what to write down. What is decided here still has to be written in the patient's file, where it can be found.

In conversations
Start one with the colleague you need an answer from.

Choose a conversation
Or start a new one with whichever can answer the question.

Help & Shortcuts

How this system is put together, and how to move through it quickly.

Keyboard shortcuts

- Open the jump-to search from anywhere
- Close the current dialog, drawer or search
- Move through search results
- Open the highlighted result
- Print the current record using the print layout
- Move between fields — every control is reachable without a mouse

Common tasks

- Registering a patient and starting a visit
Front Office — New Registration, or Returning Patient if they already have a number. A visit is created as soon as the service is chosen, and the staff follows the paper on the record.
- Turning a module on or off for this site
Settings — Modules & Services. What is offered at all depends on the facility type; the switches control what this particular site runs.
- Sending a referral and closing the loop
Clinical — Referrals — New referral. The letter is generated from the record. When the receiving facility replies, the feedback appears on the same referral.
- Submitting the monthly return

When the connection drops
The header says red the network this device from the network. Nothing entered while it is red is saved. This system has no offline mode: a form submitted with no link fails, and closing the page loses what was typed. Write the details on paper and enter them once the header is green again.

Patient confidentiality
Every screen you open is written to the audit log against your account. Never share a login, and lock the workstation when you step away.
